

Locals keen to see jobs and prosperity for Blayney

Support for jobs, growth, opportunities and prosperity are the key themes raised by local people appearing in a new video, Local Voices, released this week by Regis Resources.

When asked about his support for the McPhillamys Gold Project local business owner, farmer and long-term Blayney resident Roger Hamer said it would bring benefits including employment, business and population growth.

“I just think it’s a good thing for the town - it’s vital,” Roger said.

The video also features local business owner Phil Ryan, former Blayney High School teacher, Rachel Croft, Regis employee Stacey McFawn and local resident Tim Warwick.

Regis Resources Manager Special Projects, Tony McPaul said the video provided an opportunity for local people who support the project to share their views.

“There is a lot of support for the project and voices which are often not heard—these people were happy to speak about the project and the benefits it will bring to Blayney,” Tony said.

Blayney resident and new dad, Tim Warwick, supports the project because of the career opportunities it will provide.

“It would be good for kids leaving school to not have to leave the town,” he said.

Lyndhurst resident and Regis employee, Stacey McFawn also believes the project would be good for locals.

“This a great place to raise a family but it’s a shame that so many people have to leave town for work,” Stacey said.

“McPhillamys would provide more jobs closer to home,” she said.
